Park Avenue surgeons charge more than those in the Bronx or in New Jersey: they must be better. If you buy a stock that has just broken out to a new high, you have to be pretty sharp to be the guy who buys it at the newest, highest price, and then sells it at the newer highest, really much higher than it deserves to be price. Widespread as this belief has become in conservative circles, virtually all serious attempts to evaluate the evidence have concluded that there is little merit in this view.
